It's Saturday again.
Another day of joy!
Getting out of bed early
And waiting happily for those boys,
Josh keeps telling himself how lucky he is,
Just like a kid getting a new toy.

A man with no wife and kids,
Josh lives on his own.
At the age of 80,
Friends are all gone.
With nobody to talk to,
He felt like living in an ice home.

Things changed when he answered the door one cold day.
He saw a sunny smile on four boys' face.
One of them asked if they could visit him
Every Saturday in his place.
Josh didn't know them but nodded his head quickly,
Thanking them for their grace.

Now Josh finds himself happier than ever.
The boys not only come to see him but bring him soup.
When they ask him whether the soup is OK,
His only answer is that it's really good.
The Saturday soup warm both his stomach and heart.
The young friends help him stay in a good mood.

Have you ever seen a glacier? A glacier is a river of snow and ice high up on the mountains. Glaciers are usually white. But a glacier in Italy is turning pink. Where does the pink come from? Scientists say algae (海藻) is making parts of this glacier pink. This algae is called Chlamydomonas nivalis. It loves to live in cold water and ice. It is a red color, and grows in snow and ice on high mountains. This makes the snow and ice look pink. Many people call this "watermelon snow" or "blood snow". Watermelons are a fruit that are green on the outside, and red on the inside. They have small dark brown and black seeds. Pink snow often happens in the spring and summer. The warmer weather helps the algae to grow. But scientists say watermelon snow on glaciers is not a good thing. Glaciers are usually white. The light color helps it stay cool. But pink glaciers are darker than white glaciers. This means pink glaciers will be hotter, and will melt (融化) faster. Scientists are already worried about glaciers melting all around the world. They say glaciers in Switzerland have shrunk 10-percent in the past five years. They have never seen the glacier melt so fast before.

44. What is a glacier?

- (A) A pink river in the mountains. (B) A river that is used to grow watermelons.
- (C) A river that contains lots of algae. (D) A river made up of snow and ice.
