III.

From the TV to the dinner table, you're probably hearing a lot about something called coronavirus, or COVID-19. But what do these strange-sounding words mean? Coronavirus is a new germ that is making some people sick with an illness called COVID-19. People who get sick may have a cough, a fever, a sore throat or feel like they are having a hard time breathing. Doctors and scientists are still learning about coronavirus and COVID-19. Here are five big things you should know to help keep everyone healthy:

1. Wash your hands.

Washing your hands with soapy water for twenty seconds helps you and your family avoid getting sick and spreading germs to other people. You could sing "Mary Had a Little Lamb," while washing your hands.

2. No in-person playdates — for now.

The coronavirus can spread from one person to another, like when we share toys or hold a friend's hand. Right now, it's safer not to have play dates with friends. Although you can't visit your friends, you can still see each other in other ways: you can talk on the phone or over video chat. You can also stay in touch by writing letters or postcards.

3. Masks are safe, not scary.

If you're going out in public, like to the playground, you may see lots of people wearing masks over their faces. Don't be scared: People are doing this to help protect the person wearing them from breathing in germs or, if they are sick, from spreading the germs to others.

4. Cover your cough or sneeze.

Coronavirus germs can travel through coughs and sneezes. That's why it's important to cover your nose and mouth with your elbow or a tissue when you cough or sneeze. Wash your hands afterwards, and, if you use a tissue, make sure to throw it away.

5. Be a good helper.

Because your parents may be working from home now, they may be busy, tired or stressed-out. Give them a hand by helping with chores, like setting the table or cleaning up your toys.

Remember, it's OK to ask questions.

Don't be afraid to ask questions or share your feelings. In fact, talking about your feelings with your family can actually help you feel better and less stressed. You cannot control everything, but you can control what you do. If we all work together as a team, we can help keep ourselves, friends and family healthy.
