Can Dogs See Color?

Dogs see only black and white colors. Is that true? Scientists nowadays found out that dogs do see many colors. The colors are just not quite the same as we see.

When people can see a rainbow, they can see purple, blue, blue-green, green, yellow, orange, and red. However, when dogs see a rainbow, they only see gray, blue, yellow-brown, and yellow. It sounds interesting, right?

Dogs see red and green as a single color (yellow-brown) and also blue-green and purple as a single color (gray). This means that if you buy a pretty red toy for your puppy, it will see it as ugly yellowish brown.

Why? That’s because our eye has three different types of cells that can detect color. But dogs’ eyes only have two. This makes the range of colors that they can see much more limited.

📖 single 單一的 cell 細胞 detect 察覺 range 範圍 limited 有限制的

33. What is the reading about?
(A) How dogs see the world. (B) How to take care of dogs.
(C) Which color is dogs’ favorite. (D) How to help dogs draw a rainbow.
34. If you give your puppy a green toy car, it will see the car as the _____ one.
(A) yellow (B) blue (C) yellow-brown (D) gray
35. What is true about the reading?
(A) Dogs can see a rainbow in five different colors.
(B) Dogs can only see three colors: blue, gray, and yellow because they have three types of cells.
(C) Yellowish is a color that is too yellow, so dogs can’t see it.
(D) In dogs’ eyes, a red book and a green book are the same.
